Truly Traceable Supplements

Knowing more about where your products come from
and how they are made is called traceability.

Many people have no idea where the products they consume come from, but they still try to make choices based on the desire to safeguard themselves & their families.

Why is supplement traceability important?

Food adulteration and fraud

Whether in food or dietary supplements, adulteration and fraud are growing concerns. In the botanical supplement industry, bad actors have created an environment where fake ingredients are a common occurrence.

In many cases, if you buy botanical supplements off the shelf, you risk buying something spiked with lower quality or adulterated ingredients. This means that product efficacy and safety can be compromised, and the benefits a botanical supplement can provide are lost.

Why is supplement traceability important?

Safe supplements, guaranteed

It's one thing to say a product is safe—it's another to prove it. Nutrilite™ tests, re-tests and tests again to make sure each and every product is safe. We ensure the presence of good things and the absence of bad things. That's your assurance that Nutrilite™ products are the safe and effective choice for you and your family.
